

Pallas Wang

From Passion to Action – Pallas believes that everyone has their own music, and she has always been passionate about helping youths discover that potential. Throughout her years as a business director and, later, as a guidance counselor, she provided support and advice to teens in order to guide them down their best paths. She currently works with teens as they face personal and academic challenges and assists students from first generation and disadvantaged background, ensuring that all youth receive an opportunity to strive for success and to pursue their dreams.

As part of her effort to help teens build a strong foundation for the future, she has led trips into undeveloped areas, where she worked with students to deliver food and to provide education to children there. These experience inspired her to drive the mission of SoundPost Youth by creating a platform for teens to get involved and give back. Her creativity, enthusiasm, and compassion have motivated hundreds of students, and she hopes to inspire more teens in the community to reach for their dreams and make a difference together. In her free time, she enjoys art, music, hiking, traveling, reading, and painting.
